commercial bank loans, was greater than all ODA that year. Since 1983, as indebtedness worsened, commercial bank lending to developing countries has declined.^{30/}

79. Efforts are being made to stimulate private investment. These efforts should be geared to supporting sustainable development. The industrial and financial corporations making such investments, and the export credit, investment insurance, and other programmes that facilitate them, should incorporate sustainable development criteria into their policies.

5. Providing the Legal Means

80. National and international law has traditionally lagged behind events. Today, legal regimes are being rapidly outdistanced by the accelerating pace and expanding scale of impacts on the environmental base of development. Human laws must be reformulated to keep human activities in harmony with the unchanging and universal laws of nature. There is an urgent need:

- * to recognize and respect the reciprocal rights and responsibilities of individuals and states regarding sustainable development,
- * to establish and apply new norms for state and interstate behaviour to achieve sustainable development,
- * to strengthen and extend the application of existing laws and international agreements in support of sustainable development, and
- * to reinforce existing methods and develop new procedures for avoiding and resolving environmental disputes.

Recognizing Rights and Responsibilities

Paragraph 1 of the 1972 Stockholm Declaration said that 'Man has a fundamental right to freedom, equality and adequate living conditions, in an environment of a quality that permits a life of dignity and well-being'.^{31/} It further proclaimed the responsibility of governments to protect and improve the environment for both present and future generations. After the Declaration, several states recognized in their laws the right to an adequate environment and the right of the state to protect that environment.

Many states of their responsibility to ensure an environment for present as well as future generations is essential towards sustainable development. However, this responsibility should be facilitated by recognition of, for example, the right of individuals to know and have access to current information on the state of the environment and natural resources, the right to be consulted and to participate in decision-making on activities likely to have a significant effect on the environment, and the right to legal remedies and redress where the health or environment has been or may be adversely affected.

A woman with short grey hair, wearing a grey blazer and a pink patterned scarf, stands in a well-lit room with large windows. She is smiling and pointing towards a whiteboard that has the word "Safety" written on it. She is holding a yellow hard hat in her left hand. In the foreground, the backs of several audience members' heads are visible, indicating she is presenting to a group. The room has a modern feel with recessed ceiling lights and a dark wood-paneled wall on the right.
